

How I Will Add My Next Case Study

I will add my next case study to the Projects section of my portfolio, using the same structure as my existing project case studies.

The process will follow a simple three-beat structure:

1. Problem : Explain what problem the project was created to solve and who it was intended for.
2. What I Did : Describe my role, the approach I took, the technologies and tools I used, and the key design or engineering decisions I made.
3. What Came of It : Explain the final result, what I learned, how the project was evaluated, and what I would improve next.

I will create a new case-study page for the project, add it as a new project card on the portfolio homepage, add its image and relevant technology tags, and link the card to the new case-study page.

I will keep the same visual style, typography, spacing, and identity system used throughout the existing portfolio so the new case study feels like part of the same product.
